ORDER RE MOTIONS FOR RESTRAINING ORDERS FILED BY ATTORNEY GERI GREEN

INTRODUCTION

In this fee dispute between a CJA attorney and her freelance paralegal, the attorney has filed emergency motions in eight pending criminal actions before six different judges in this district seeking relief from a state administrative agency award for failure to pay her paralegal.

1 All assigned judges have consented to have the undersigned judge adjudicate the parallel 2 motions. Although the CJA attorney is largely correct in her view of the federal law at issue, the 3 extraordinary relief requested must, on the equities, be DENIED.

4 STATEMENT

5 Attorney Geri Green was (but no longer is) on this district's panel of private lawyers 6 eligible for appointment to represent indigent accuseds in criminal cases under the Criminal 7 Justice Act, 18 U.S.C. 3006(A), our so-called CJA panel attorneys. The CJA panel attorneys 8 perform vital work for the district court and the nation and are a valued part of our criminal 9 justice system. Since 2007, Attorney Green has been appointed as CJA counsel in at least 10 fourteen cases. In the eight federal criminal cases at issue here, she used a freelance paralegal, 11 Marcie Dresbaugh, who was authorized to incur a certain amount of time in the cases pursuant to 12 the Act, General Order Numbers 2 and 50, and this district's CJA Policy Manual. See General 13 Order Nos. 2 and 50, available at www.cand.uscourts.gov/generalorders; CJA Policy Manual, 14 available at www.cand.uscourts.gov/guidelines.

15 Although Attorney Green submitted the original request for authorization to use 16 Ms. Dresbaugh as a paralegal, where such pre-approval was necessary, Ms. Dresbaugh herself 17 invoiced our CJA Unit and was paid directly by the CJA Unit. That is, Ms. Dresbaugh's billings 18 and payment did not travel through Attorney Green, except to the extent that a CJA attorney 19 must sign the service providers' voucher to certify that the services were rendered in a particular 20 CJA case. Because some of the billings were in excess of the limit imposed in advance or were 21 not otherwise justified, the CJA payments to Paralegal Dresbaugh were somewhat less than the 22 amounts she invoiced. Again, the checks were sent to Paralegal Dresbaugh at her separate work 23 address on Sutter Street in San Francisco, not to Attorney Green's office address on 24 Montgomery Street.

25 Ordinarily, the CJA story would have ended there (subject to any federal appeals, of 26 which there were none). It turns out, however, that Paralegal Dresbaugh went to the California 27 Division of Labor Standards Enforcement and complained that Attorney Green owed her the 28 shortfall (plus overtime and penalties), claiming that an employer-employee relationship existed

1 between them. Ms. Dresbaugh first filed her claim with the DLSE on February 17, 2011.
2 Significantly, her claim involved both CJA work and non-CJA work, the latter having nothing to 3 do with our CJA process. One of her CJA invoices was still being reviewed for supplemental 4 CJA payment at the time she complained about it to the DLSE. On October 13, 2011, the DLSE 5 issued an award finding that Ms. Dresbaugh was an “employee” of Attorney Green and was 6 owed $4942 in back wages and $5078 in interest and penalties thereon (Beckelman Decl. ¶ 4).
7 Of that back-pay amount, $2382 was for CJA matters; the remainder of the award was for 8 private, retained, non-CJA work. Notably, the CJA Unit subsequently awarded Ms. Dresbaugh 9 another $1682, so the DLSE award was based on premature information — that is, the CJA 10 tabulation was still a work in progress when the DLSE award was decided.

11 Attorney Green then filed an appeal in San Francisco Superior Court, captioned Marcella
12 Dresbaugh v. Law Office of Geri Lynn Green, L.C., Case No. CGC-11-515557. Ms. Dresbaugh 13 is represented in that action by the DLSE, which now seeks attorney’s fees in addition to the 14 DLSE award. While the action was pending, as stated, additional CJA funds were requested and 15 paid to Paralegal Dresbaugh in the amount of $1682 for prior work performed in our Franco 16 case. Thus, the total shortfall for all CJA cases between the invoiced bills submitted by 17 Paralegal Dresbaugh and the payments made to her by the CJA Unit now comes to $700. At our 18 recent hearing, DLSE counsel were unable to explain the extent to which, if at all, the most 19 recent CJA payment has been backed out of the DLSE award.

20 After numerous postponements, the state action was set for trial in San Francisco 21 Superior Court on March 18, 2013. That same day — over two years after Ms. Dresbaugh first 22 filed her claim with the DLSE and more than one year after she filed the appeal — Attorney 23 Green filed emergency motions seeking a temporary restraining order, permanent injunction, and 24 contempt order here in eight federal criminal matters. Attorney Green’s motions seek to enjoin 25 Ms. Dresbaugh and the DLSE from enforcement of the DLSE’s award against Attorney Green 26 and to enjoin them from litigating her appeal in state court. Attorney Green noticed the motions 27 to be heard in our court on or after March 26, a date by which the state court trial was either 28

1 expected to be completed or virtually completed. She did not move the state court for a stay to 2 allow the federal court to consider the motions prior to trial.

3 Meanwhile, trial proceeded in San Francisco Superior Court before the Honorable A.
4 James Robertson. Final arguments in that case were scheduled for immediately after our own 5 hearing yesterday. It may be helpful to Judge Robertson and the DLSE to have the benefit of our 6 view of the matter from across the street, so this order will take the time to explain the CJA law 7 and program.

8 Again, the assigned judges in the eight federal actions listed below have agreed to allow 9 the undersigned judge to adjudicate Attorney Green's motions, given their parallel nature. In 10 each of these actions, Paralegal Dresbaugh billed the CJA for work performed, and received 11 payment from the CJA of less than the total invoiced amount. For example, out of invoices 12 totaling $11,210.50 on the Franco case, Paralegal Dresbaugh was paid $10,682 by the CJA after 13 review and auditing — a shortfall of $528.50. The amounts invoiced by Paralegal Dresbaugh 14 compared to the amounts she was paid by CJA are listed in the table below:

Case	Amount Invoiced by Dresbaugh	Amount Paid to Dresbaugh by CJA	Difference
United States of America v. Manuel Franco, No. CR 08-730-WHA	$11,210.50	$10,682.00	$528.50
United States of America v. Rafael Hernandez-Gumora, No. CR 00-91-WHA	$413.00	$399.00	$14.00
United States of America v. John Magpantay, No. CR 10-102-CRB	$343.00	$311.50	$31.50
United States of America v. Andrea Neal Pickrell, No. CR 04-407-MMC	$87.50	$80.50	$7.00
United States of America v. Henry Tobias, No. CR 04-417-MMC	$45.50	$38.50	$7.00

1	United States of America v. Vincent D. Hunter, No. CR 09-527-DLJ	$259.00	$161.00	$98.00
3	United States of America v. Antonio Lacerda, No. CR 09-1163-JSW	$1,620.50	$1,613.50	$7.00
5	United States of America v. Blanca Silva, No. CR 09-1124-SI	$136.50	$129.50	$7.00
6		_____	_____	_____
7	Total	$14,115.50	$13,415.50	$700.00

In sum, the federal portion of this dispute is a fight over $700 (plus penalties and overtime attributed thereto). For the following reasons, Attorney Green's view of the federal law is largely correct but the extraordinary relief she seeks must be DENIED.

ANALYSIS

The Criminal Justice Act provides in part that:

Except as so authorized or directed, no such person or organization may request or accept any payment or promise of payment for representing a defendant.

18 U.S.C. 3006A(f). Under this provision, a paralegal providing services on behalf of an indigent defendant who directly submits invoices to the district court for CJA payment may not accept payment from any other person for any portion of the invoice that is denied by the court. As held by the Seventh Circuit in a similar case, once a district court authorizes funds for a service provider upon request of CJA-appointed counsel, "the government is generally the sole source of payment for services rendered unless the district court finds that funds are available from or on behalf of the defendant for this purpose." See United States v. Silva, 140 F.3d 1098 (7th Cir. 1998). Our own court of appeals has not ruled on the issue, but this order anticipates that it would follow the Silva decision. Any other result would jeopardize an important federal statute by putting CJA attorneys at risk for unpaid amounts and thus dissuading attorneys from taking on CJA cases in the first place.

In this district, General Order Numbers 2 and 50 and the CJA Policy Manual set forth the specific procedures and requirements for providing and receiving payment for representation of 1 indigent defendants under the Act. These orders and guidance were in effect in relevant part and 2 available during the period at issue, 2009 through 2012. See General Order No. 2, filed Jan. 3, 3 1973 (amended Feb. 20, 2000, Dec. 20, 2011, and Feb. 23, 2012); General Order No. 50, filed 4 June 30, 2000 (amended Oct. 16, 2000, Apr. 24, 2001, June 18, 2002, Mar. 15, 2005, and 5 Dec. 20, 2011); CJA Policy Manual. Specifically, the CJA plan provides that appointed counsel 6 may obtain, subject to later review, necessary services without prior authorization if the total 7 cost of services does not exceed a certain amount (in 2005, that limit was set at $500; the limit 8 was later raised to $800). See General Order No. 50, dated Mar. 15, 2005, at 2; General Order 9 No. 50, dated Dec. 20, 2011, at 4. For services exceeding this amount, CJA counsel must seek 10 prior authorization of funds from the district court. In all instances, the services invoiced must 11 be both reasonable and necessary for the effective representation of the indigent defendant.

12 The General Orders and CJA Policy Manual set forth detailed instructions and procedures 13 for counsel and service providers regarding the submission of invoices, the process for seeking 14 authorization of funds, and so on. Service providers are expected to be informed of and to 15 comply with the specific terms of the court's funding authorization orders, including not billing in 16 excess of the amount authorized. With regard to paralegal services, our CJA Policy Manual states 17 that:

18 Use of paralegals is encouraged but must be pre-approved if the 19 expenditure will exceed $800.00, whether independent or 20 employed in the same firm as appointed counsel . . . The CJA 21 guideline rate is $35.00 to $55.00 per hour, depending on skills 22 and experience. For paralegals who are employees, the appropriate hourly rate is the salaried hourly rate, plus costs of employer-paid basic benefits. Whether in house or independent, paralegals must be billed on a separate CJA 21 or CJA 31, even if the payee is the attorney or law firm.

23 CJA Policy Manual. Paralegal Dresbaugh requested and received an hourly rate of $35.00 per 24 hour. This is consistent with the billing rate of an independent paralegal, rather than the in-house 25 paralegal rate, which is calculated as hourly salary plus employer-paid benefits. Moreover, as a 26 general matter, invoices from in-house paralegals are submitted to the CJA Unit by the employer 27 law firm; in contrast, independent paralegals submit invoices to, and receive payment directly 28 from, the CJA Unit, as was the case with Paralegal Dresbaugh.

1 By submitting invoices and receiving payments from the CJA Unit for services provided 2 to indigent defendants, Paralegal Dresbaugh was benefitting from and acquiescing in the funding 3 source established by the Act and thus its terms as implemented in this district. This does not 4 necessarily mean that she was (or was not) an independent contractor for CJA purposes — that 5 terminology is beside the point. The main point is this: Having provided and received payment 6 for paralegal services for indigent clients from 2009 through 2012, Paralegal Dresbaugh accepted 7 and acquiesced in our CJA policy and procedures, which establish a carefully regulated system 8 through which payment is made for services only if specific requirements are met. Importantly, 9 under the Act, service providers are limited to whatever they receive under our CJA plan. Any 10 other rule would put CJA counsel at risk from suits like this one and deter them from taking CJA 11 cases in the first place. This would frustrate an Act of Congress. Paralegal Dresbaugh is in 12 violation of 18 U.S.C. 3006A(f).

13 No one should worry over the possibility that CJA attorneys will run roughshod over 14 freelance paralegals and badger them into working beyond the authorized limits. We have one of 15 the best managed CJA programs in the United States. If we learn of any such abuse, we will 16 address it by removing the attorney from the CJA panel or by other appropriate action.
17 Furthermore, the CJA Manual informs claimants, which would include service providers such as 18 Ms. Dresbaugh, that they can request a copy of any modified vouchers or inquire as to the 19 specific reasons for any reduction.

21 Had Attorney Green sought the relief now requested when the state agency proceeding 22 began, then the district court would presumably have had the authority under the All-Writs Act, 23 28 U.S.C. 1651(a), to preserve its exclusive jurisdiction to regulate invoicing and payment for its 24 CJA providers. Very possibly, the district court would have intervened to protect its federal CJA 25 interest. Given the fact that Paralegal Dresbaugh directly billed and received payment from the 26 CJA Unit, rather than billing through Attorney Green, everyone concerned should have known 27 that payment for CJA services was limited to that allowed by the district court. Indeed, 28

1 Ms. Dresbaugh's own contemporary statement appears to reflect this understanding. In an email 2 to the CJA Unit dated July 20, 2010, Ms. Dresbaugh thanked CJA Unit staff for providing 3 instructions regarding requesting transcripts and stated, "I am an independent contractor who does 4 free lance paralegal work from [Geri Green's] office, so perhaps they didn't think to pass it along 5 to me." How Ms. Dresbaugh could have claimed otherwise to the DLSE is a mystery. As far as 6 our court is aware, Ms. Dresbaugh is the first freelance paralegal ever to sue a CJA attorney over 7 unpaid CJA invoices.

8 Instead of seeking such prompt relief from the district court, however, Attorney Green 9 waited and took her chances with the DLSE, perhaps because most of the amounts at issue were 10 on retained matters and not on CJA matters. After she acquiesced in the DLSE process and 11 received an adverse outcome, Attorney Green then filed an appeal in state court, the very appeal 12 she is now trying to stop dead in its tracks. By letter dated October 27, 2011, Attorney Green 13 requested that the CJA Unit indemnify her, but she never sought any of the federal relief that she 14 now seeks through her motions. While Attorney Green's letter requesting indemnification 15 indicated that she was preparing to file a federal action for declaratory and injunctive relief, no 16 such action was ever filed. Instead, she waited until the first day of trial in her own appeal to seek 17 relief. Attorney Green has proceeded on a course of strategic convenience and delay. This has 18 resulted in a federal-state collision that could have been avoided by a more timely motion. For 19 the foregoing reasons, her request for injunctive relief is DENIED.

20 In denying extraordinary relief, this order does not suggest that the California courts 21 should ignore the federal CJA issue or deny relief to Attorney Green. To the contrary, this order 22 has laid out the way our federal CJA system works so that the information will be available for 23 consideration by the California courts. Those courts are fully capable of vindicating the federal 24 interest if it deserves to be vindicated in the particulars of a given record. Attorney Green 25 acquiesced in state court proceedings (and herself took the appeal in question to state court).
26 Consequently, she will now have to look to that system for final relief and to the able judgment of 27 Judge Robertson. Perhaps Judge Robertson would be inclined to reduce the DLSE award to the 28

1 extent it is based upon amounts billed to the federal CJA, whether paid or not. It is up to Judge 2 Robertson.

3 CONCLUSION

4 For the reasons stated above, the motions for a temporary restraining order, preliminary 5 injunction, and contempt order are DENIED. Given that these motions have been filed in criminal 6 cases already closed, these motions are now over and closed at the district court and any further 7 federal relief must be sought from our court of appeals.

9 IT IS SO ORDERED.
